"For five years," said Mr. Westenberg, "I suffered from a combination of ills. First I was racked with rhetwantism; pext my throat was ulcerated and sore; there was a constant discharge, and altogether I was miserable. To cap the climax my appetite failed, my stomach became weak, and the food I ate gave me no strength. I could not sieep, and was rapidly all other invalids I tried doctor after doctor and remedy after remedy, but only got worse. At last I went to Dr. Waiker, the specialist. He told me I had chronic eatarth and nervous prostration. He said he would cure me, and he did. I have not a pain nor an ache left; no more sore throat or clogged-up head; stomach strong erough to digest an ox; sleeping soundly every night and getting fat. I believe I'm the healthiest man in this section."

Following is an extract from a letter from Ignatius M. Cox, a rising young lawyer of Charleston, W. Va.: "Ever since I was a boy I have suffered much pain and mortification from pimples and blackheads on my face. For the last two years my face has been a sight to behold. I tried numerous recipes and prescriptions to get rid of the horrible disfigurement, but did not succeed until I wrote to Dr. R. A. Walker of Washington. His treatment acted like a charm, and I am now without a sign of a pimple, blackhead or scar on my face or body."

wise is the man or woman who recognizes the symptoms and the danger of nervous exhaustion, and avoids the threatened collapse by seeking an immediate restoration of the lost strength and vitality. Mr. Marshall P. Jones, late of the Columbian University, admits that he did not realize the seriousness of his condition until he read in the Washington papers an interviewith Dr. Walker, the specialist. "Then," said Mr. Jones, "I went to see Dr. Walker, For some time I had felt all run down; was weak and nervous; found it difficult to concentrate my mind on anything; couldn't muster up courage to do any mental or physical work; didn't sleep well, and had no appetite. I couldn't make anybody believe I was ill—not even my doctor. But Dr. Walker knew in an instant what alled me, and he soon had my nervous system in good order. The beauty of it is that I feel stronger and more energetic and clear headed than I ever did in my life before."

Mrs. James I. Lucas writes from North Windham, Me.: "By taking the treatment sent me by Dr. Walker, and following his directions implicitly, I have been completely cured of a trouble which the doctors here all pronounced catarrh of the stomach. You cannot say too much in praise of Dr. Walker."

What first strikes the traveler who has heard so much of the young American girls is the absolute impossibility of distinguishing them from the young women." The fact, so much commented upon, That they can come and go alone as they please would not suffice to establish the confusion. The identity goes further. They have the same jewels, he same toilets, the same liberty of speech and laughter, the same books to read, the same n anner, the same beauty already fully developed, and thanks to the invention of the "chaperon," there is not a theater or restaurant party to which they cannot go, alone naturally, and at the invitation of any gentleman of their acquaintance. The quality of that official surveillance may be measured from another fact, that the young lady for whom the bachelor gives the party chooses herself the chaperon. the party chooses herself the chaperon. The younge, that chaperon is the more she is appreciated. The young widow and the "grass widow"—the woman separated, divorced or simply isolated temporarily from her husband—tills the ideal conditions of the part. You might just as well say that the young girls whom you see at Delengies. young girls whom you see at Delmonico's in the company of three young men and the said chaperon, or who go and take tea at the rooms of another young man, are as free as though they had no one to look after them than themselves. It is that habit of acting for themselves without control which is manifested in the singular assurance of their countenances. . Girls and Marriage.

One of the most amiable men of New York, who is a poet, has had the idea of ferming a collection of miniatures, where he places, with their permission, all the professional beauties of the town. I remember that in examining them with the magnifying glass through the pane behind which those hundreds of pretty and fine faces smile forth, I sought to guess those who had known marriage and could not succeed. What, in truth, will it bring them more when it comes? Duties, a husband to bear with, children to care for, a house to look after. Today the young girl has none of the burden of those chains. She knows it, and she enjoys the time she has to the utmost. She will not have one liberty the more when she is married, and she will have less time in which to amuse herself. But in most cases she marries late. If it is not quite an end to her, as it is for the young man of Paris when he decides to break off his bachelor life, it is at least a commencement of abdication. The majority do not conceal

"We must amuse ourselves before marriage," said one of them gayly to me. "Does one know what will come after?" "Does one know what will come after."
The divorce cases, of which the newspapers publish the details from time to time, prove that that young person had as much good sense as beauty. For my part, after having closely investigated the human conditions here and in Europe, I think that for having closely investigated the human conditions here and in Europe, I think that for a young man of twenty-five years the best chances of happiness are to be an Englishman of good family, concluding his studies at Oxford, and for a young girl to be born at Oxford, and for a young-girl to be born American, with a father who has made his money in mines, railways or land specula-tion, and to arrive with good sponsors in the society of New York or Washington.

There was no strike on the Anacostia street car line this morning as predicted by some. What really did occur was the resignation of one driver, who said he had the offer of a better position. Everything in railway circles has resumed its normal condition, and the two police, who have been on duty in anticipation of trouble have been withdrawn. A NEW BANKING PLAN.

scheme Advecated by the American Association. The most important subject considered by the bankers' convention at Baltimore has been the currency plan of the Baltimore bankers, presented by Mr. C. C. Homer, president of the Second National Bank of that city. At the conclusion of his address on Thurs day, Mr. Hepburn moved that the principles underlying the proposed plan be indorsed and adopted, and that legislation be recommended along the lines embodied in recommended along the lines embodied in it. The resolution was adopted.

A committee of nine was appointed to lay the plan before Congress. The committee comprises Charles C. Homer of Baltimore, Horace White of New York, Joseph C. Hendricks of New York, Skipwith Wilmer of Baltimore, R. J. Lowry of Atlanta, Ga., A. P. Heburn of New York, Charles Parsons of St. Louis, G. L. Christian of Richmond, Va., and W. T. Baker of Chicago. The main points of the plan are as follows:

The provision of the national banking act requiring the deposit of bonds to secure circulating notes hereafter issued shall be repealed. Allow the banks to issue circulating notes to the amount 50 per cent of their paid-up unimpaired capital, subject to a tax of ne-half of 1 per centum per annum upon the average amount of circulation outstandthe average amount of circulation outstanding for the year, and an additional circulation of 25 per centum of the paid-up, unimpaired capital, subject both to the tax of one-half of 1 per centum per annum and to an additional heavy tax per annum upon the average amount of such circulation outstanding for the year, said additional 25 per centum to be known as "emergency circulation."

The tax of one-half of 1 per centum per annum upon the average amount of circulation outstanding shall be paid to the treasurer of the United States as a means of revenue, out of which the expenses of the office of the controller of the currency, the printing of circulating notes, etc., shall be defrayed.

The excess over one-half of 1 per centum of the tax imposed upon the "emergency circulation" shall be paid into the "guar-antee fund" referred to in section 6. The banks issuing circulation shall de-posit and maintain with the treasurer of the United States a "redemption fund" equal to 5 per centum of their average out-standing circulation as provided for the standing circulation, as provided for under the existing law.

The redemption of the notes of all banks, solvent or insolvent, to be made as provided for by the existing law. A Guarantee Fund. Create a "guarantee fund" through the the amount of circulation received the first year. Thereafter impose a tax of one-half of 1 per centum upon the average amount of outstanding circulation, the same to be paid into this fund until it shall equal 5 per centum of the entire circulation outstanding, when the collection of such tax shall be suspended, to be resumed whenever the controller of the currency shall deem it necessary.

The notes of insolvent banks shall be redeemed by the treasurer of the United States out of the guarantee fund, if it shall be sufficient, and if not sufficient then out of any money in the treasury, the same to be reimbursed to the treasury out of the "guarantee fund," when replenished either from the assets of the failed bank or from the tax aforesaid. National banking associations organized after this plan shall have gone into operation may receive circulation from the con-troller of the currency upon paying into the "guarantee fund" a sum bearing the ratio to the circulation applied for and allowed that the "guarantee fund" bears to the total circulation outstanding, and to be subject to the tax of one-half of 1 per centum per annum, as called for by the treasurer of the United States for the creation and mainten-ance of this fund.

Circulation can be retired by a bank at any time upon depositing with the treasurer of the United States lawful money in amount equal to the sum desired to be withdrawn, and immediately upon such deposit the tax indicated in sections 2, 3 and 6 shall cease upon the circulation so retired.

cease upon the circulation so retired.

In the event of the winding up of the business of a bank by reason of insolvency or otherwise, the treasurer of the United States, with the concurrence of the controller of the currency, may, on the application of the directors or of the liquidator, receiver, assignee or other process. receiver, assignee or other proper official, and upon being satisfied that proper arrangements have been made for the payment of the notes of the bank and any tax due thereon, pay over to such directors, liquidator, receiver, assignee or other proper official the amount at the credit of the bank in the "redemption fund" indicated in section 4.

Henry of Navarre-Clifford-Domino race at Willard's Saturday night, and one of them was bewalling the fate that led him to be quite a substantial amount on the favorite "I believe I'd be more successful naming losers than winners," he remarked, with a bitter inflection, when a well-known local newspaper man spoke up.

"Picking losers is not as easy as you appear to imagine," he said. "Some years ago I was over in New York while the horses were at Monmouth. I made the St. James my headquarters, where, as you all know, Billy Ottman is in charge of the room. I was leaning on the bar onnight falking with Billy after a bad day at the track, and made a remark similar to that Bob dropped just now about picking losers. Ottman stopped shaking my drink and quietly said it was just as hard to name losers as it was to select winners. Of course, I laughed at him. The idea of not being able to name a sure loser in every race was preposterous to me, and I said so Ottman smiled and remarked that he'd bet me a bottle of wine that I couldn't name the losers in the six races on the card next day at Monmouth. The entries were al-ready posted, so I picked out six of what I considered were the worst old skates that ever hobbled out of a paddock. I was scornful when Ottman advised me to back each one of them to win for a little bit, so as to get even on the wine I'd have to pay for, but I'm a Dutchman if two of my dead sure losers didn't win their races next day. You fellows may laugh, but just try picking losers some time and see how it will come the most remarkable men at the Maryland bar," said Mr. Wm. Veirs Boule of Rockville, at the Riggs House this morning. "He was a legal fighter of remarkable vigor and versatility, and never tired in a contest. He was dogmatic, I should say, and never gave up an opinion when he had formed one without suffering a great deal of mental unhappiness. Indeed, a belief once formed with him became a vital part of his being, and he defended it with as much earnestness as he would have protected his person. He told me once that he had never taken a case in which he did not believe in the right of his client, and I remember an incident which will excellently illustrate this side of his character. Many years ago a man named Lynn was killed and one Davis was charged with his mur-der. Judge Maulsby defended Davis. There was never such a legal battle waged on a lawyer's part to save a client from the rope. Davis was convicted in the criminal court, which was held in another county than that in which the crime had been commit-ted. Maulsby having secured a change of venue. An appeal was taken, but the court of appeals sustained the verdict. Then Judge Maulsby, confident of his client's innccence, went to the legislature and actually secured the passage of a measure directting the court of appeals to entertain a mo-tion for a new trial for Davis. The man was convicted a second time. His un-wearied attorney turned his attention to the governor and pleaded, but in vain, for ex-ecutive elemency. He was downhearted to a degree when he found the governor ob-durate and swore an innecest man was bea degree when he found the governor obdurate, and swore an innocent man was being sacrificed. On the day before the execution Davis confessed to the killing of Lynn. Judge Maulsby wouldn't believe it, saying the published confession was a newspaper sensation, and telegraphed Davis, asking if it was true that he had confessed.

When an affirmative reply was received, the old lawyer could find no words strong enough to characterize Davis for having lied to him in asserting his innocence.
When Lynn had been killed his body had been robbed of $750. Davis had given Judge Maulsby $500 to defend him. As soon as the lawyer received Davis' affirmation of the confession, he took the money to the murdered man's widow and gave it to her, saying he was sure his client had taken it from his victim, and that he could not keep such blood money. Judge Maulsby was indeed a remarkable man in many respects, and I reckon few lawyers like him are

"The cider presses are in operation all over the land fust now," said J. R. Wells of Richmond at the Ebbitt this morning and those people who aver that man is the only animal who indulges to excess in intoxicants, and does it because he likes it, can have a fine chance to change their minds by visiting a cider press, and seeing the way the wasps and yellow jackets get their skins full with malice prepense. I have noticed the insects I speak of as drunk as lords from the effects of indulgence in the drippings of a cider press, or the juice that remains in the pulp that is thrown aside after being pressed out. The sugar in the juice, by exposure to the air, is converted into alcohol to a greater or less degree, and a wasp is in his glory when he comes across such tipple. Any man who makes cider and is at all observman who makes cider and is at all observant will tell you how wasps and yellow jackets will fill up and then crawl for all the world like a toper with a jag on, to some convenient spot in the grass and keel right over into torpidity. This is no ghost story, but a natura' history fact. A good able-bodied wasp can get drunker than anything else that moves, and nothing suits him better than to do it."

"To persons brought up in God-fearing, Sabbath-observing New England, or in the east generally, the west is a source of a great shock upon first acquaintance," said D. A. Buckner of Chicago at the Riggs House last night. "The idea of stores being kept open on Sunday is awful enough to contemplate, but when the theaters boldly announce that the changes in their bills take place on Sunday night the easterner wishes himself back home, where respect for holy things has not been lost in the mad whirl that the world calls enterprise. There is a movement on foot in Chicago just now that sounds impossible when described to New England ears. Sev. when described to New England ears. Several ministers and many laymen are trying to create a sentiment that will cause Chicago people to buy their meats and groceries on other days than Sundays, so that dealers in such necessities will be compelled to close on that day, and thus their closes and amplious one day of give their cierks and employes one day of rest in the seven. Think of such a cru-sade as that being started in Boston, for

"Commercial depression in the United States does not seem to prevent English capitalists from eagerly seeking the opportunity to invest in our enterprises," said W. C. Hayward of St. Paul at the Arlington last night, "They gained control of many of the largest breweries in the country several years ago, and a few days ago they made another capitalistic coup out in my reighborhood, which will give them authority over a most important branch of trade and let them draw substantial profits accordingly. Just as I left home the announcement was made that an English syndicate had bought all the paper and pulp factories in the Fox river valley of Wisconsin for $10,000,000. Two establishments only were holding out and they of Wisconsin for $19,000,000. Two establishments only were holding out, and they merely did so to settle some details before going into the hands of the syndicate. The properties comprise about thirty paper mills and twenty pulp factories. Their combined output amounts to about $50,000 a day, the paper mills turning out something like 1,500 miles of paper seventy-six inches wide, and the pulp factories making 300 tons of pulp. A central office is to be established in Chicago, in which all the business of the various properties will be transacted, and a central warehouse will also be established. In this way the cost of marketing the product will be reduced to a minimum, and the profits that made fifty proprietors well-to-do will be correspondingly enlarged for the benefit of the few who compose the syndicate. Our English brethren know all about the advantages of trusts, you may well believe, and find the United States a feutrolic and they made the contral trusted and trusted and the contral trusted and the contral trusted and the contral trusted and trusted and the contral trusted and trusted tages of trusts, you may well believe, and find the United States a fruitful field for
